Allen says Dublin BART rail feasible

Bay Area Rapid Transit District director Robert Allen of Livermore, responding to a Times editorial page column of Dec. 31, contends that having valley communities try and extricate themselves from the BART district is "not that simple."

Further, Allen says "BART rail (linking Bay Fair through Eden Canyon to Dublin) is feasible. Ten miles — from Bay Fair to Dublin — would lie in the BART-compatible median of the 238/580 freeway being rebuilt over the next decade."

"Aside from end entry and exit, there would be none of the construction inconvenience in that stretch that Mr. Fischer (editorial page columnist Al Fischer) suggests," adds Allen.

Yet, Allen says in the same letter he is "not yet ready to commit my vote on the BART board either for or against LPX (Livermore-Pleasanton BART rail extension)."

Allen believes population growth induced by BART rail may be reason to reject the line. "Better transit might be a boon to many, but it could also destroy the rural character of our Valley. Funding such a line could pose problems."

The column in the Dec. 31 issue of The Times had said in part, "Getting a rail line through Eden Canyon would be one of the most monumental earth-moving and construction jobs in Bay Area history — and would the eventual patronage warrant the astronomical expense — not to mention the traffic inconvenience caused by construction?"

Present plans call for construction work on widening and improving Highway 580 through the canyon until 1983.

BART feeder buses have plyed that route in linking valley points with BART stations since December of 1974.

The column had proposed that "the councils of Pleasanton and Livermore and the Valley Community Services District board hold a series of joint meetings to explore contracting with AC Transit, and also to look at the possibility of detaching from the BART district."

"The latter may be difficult if not downright impossible," the writer commented, "but topography is the key."

In response, on the idea of detaching from the BART district, Allen responded, "It's not that simple. In any event we'd be paying property taxes until 1999 for bonds to which the voters committed us in 1962 — and we'd have no say in running the district. And who's to say that the legislature would let us pull out even if we wanted to."

Going by Allen's statement, then, taxpayers in the valley paid out for 12 years and did not receive any kind of direct transit service until BART feeder service (using AC Transit buses) was started in December of 1974.

Alluding to the statement in the column, "Can you picture such S.F.-Oakland directors as Elmer Coopr, Ella Hill Hutch, John Kirkwood and Dr. Harvey Glasser voting to approve additional bus routing for the Livermore-Amador Valley?", Allen replies, "Granted that dealing with the present BART board is difficult. That should change in November — maybe sooner."

Allen concludes, in his letter, "In the meantime our best course may be in the Legislature — demanding better express bus service to BART as the price of an extended ½ cent sales tax for BART. With proposals to fund BART operating deficits now being considered, this is the time for the Valley to be heard in Sacramento.

Not expressly mentioned, either in the column or the letter, was the study initiated by BART General Manager Frank Herringer late last year on the subject of curtailing or maintaining the level of express bus service between BART stations, valley and Contra Costa County points.

As regards Allen's statement saying "we'd have no say in running the district," such an aspect would be taxation without representation.

Going by the draft final report issued in March of 1975, the Livermore-Pleasanton BART Extension study, valley taxpayers would continue to pay into BART for at least another 14 years before any rail service is realized.

The latter assumes that no environmentalist suits or greater financial problems occur in the interim time.

Brandes on top of ballot

PLEASANTON — The coveted top spot on the ballot has gone to Frank Brandes in the city council race.

Pleasanton and all other general law cities in California will follow a special alphabetical order determined Tuesday by a random draw at the secretary of state's office.

The draw Tuesday went in the following order: K, Q, U, B, C. N, L, H, E, P, D, F, X, O, A, M, Z, W, S, G, J, T, I, V, Y, R.

Brandes will be first on the council ballot, followed in order by William Herlihy, Robert Attebery, Gene Finch, Roger McLain, Ken Mercer, and Jim Jordan.

Prior to a change in state law, incumbents were listed first. Legislators agreed with reformers who said this gave incumbents an unfair advantage. They also agreed that to prevent favoritism to those alphabet whose last names are high or low in the alphabet, the secretary of state's office would conduct a reordering of the alphabet every three months by random draw so that things would be evened out as much as possible in each election.

The new law also states that an incumbent may not call himself or herself an incumbent unless he or she has served in the office at least one year prior to the time of filing. William Herlihy is the only candidate in the election March 2 who will be able to list himself as an incumbent. Councilman Roger McLain was appointed to the council approximately eight months prior to the filing period. He filled the vacancy created by Floyd Mori's election to the Assembly.

Candidates are permitted a maximum of three words to describe themselves on the ballot Herlihy is expected to list himself as an incumbent. Other designations, as listed on the candidates' filing papers, are: Brandes, controller-auditor; Attebery, independent insurance agent; Finch. local businessman; McLain, M.E. design associate; Mercer, manager, telephone utility; and Jordan, writer/editor.

Chamber scans 1975

PLEASANTON — "The problems that confronted this community in 1975 are still with us in 1976," a Tuesday luncheon gathering of local businessmen was advised. Ben Fernandez, outgoing president of the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce, summed up "a busy and challenging year for the Chamber" in his final report to that body.

"The sewer crisis, revitalization of the downtown area, traffic congestion" were cited by Fernandez as major issues of the past year "that still need answers this year."

The "artificial barrier" created by Interstate 680 and which "separates one-third of our community from the rest of the city," is a major problem, the outgoing chamber president said.

Touching on another controversy of 1975, Fernandez noted that "We still love our parades," adding that he is confident agreement will be reached by the Chamber, the Pleasanton Jaycees and the Fair Association board of directors to "guarantee a Fair Parade at least for this Bicentennial Year." The future of that traditional mid-summer cavalcade seems very much in doubt however.

Councilman Roger McLain reminded the business group that "growth is still the big battle, with the question now whether BASSA, EPA or Zone 7 will have the final say" in setting local growth rates. He urged the local populace to "keep informed" on these issues, and to be particularly alert for the upcoming elections to name new members to the Zone 7 Water Conservation and Flood Control board.

Recalling the ill-fated Downtown Redevelopment venture, McLain observed that "the chamber is going to have to assert some leadership" in providing revitalization for the city's century-old core area.

The chamber membership was also warned that "deliberations now under way" involving Zone 7 and related study groups "could set the growth limits for each of these communities, regardless of any General Plan review at the local level." The reference was to the sizing of a $100 million outfall line to the Bay that could limit the Valley's ability to grow simply by regulating the outfall of sewer wastes through that line.

Six flee from Santa Rita

PLEASANTON — Six inmates, most awaiting trial on a variety of charges ranging from grand theft to sexual offenses, escaped yesterday from the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center.

A spokesman for the jail said a 9:30 a.m. accounting uncovered the escape. The last bed check was at 7 a m., the spokesman said.

A wristband from one of the escapees was found in a public phone booth on North L Street in Livermore yesterday afternoon by an anonymous citizen.The inmate who wore that wristband was reportedly from Fremont, but no indication of the path of his flight was given by Sheriff's Dept. deputies.

Missing are: James Arwood, 18, of Fremont; Armando Garcia, 41, of Oakland; Gary Glaser, 32, of Oakland; Doyle Gray, 21 of Oakland; Keith Sanders, 24, of Oakland; and Larry Thomas, 18, of Ft. Worth, Texas.

A Sheriff's Dept. helicopter search of the valley uncovered no leads in the case. The chopper search would probably continue early tomorrow, a spokesman said.

Scheidig says:

'Guessing on suit'

PLEASANTON — It's presumptuous to say that Judge Robert Bostick will overturn the 1972 sewer priority agreement, City Attorney Ken Scheidig told The Times yesterday.

Scheidig was responding to a story in Times Tuesday which quoted attorney Alan Grossman to the effect that Bostick may overturn the 1972 agreement, a move which probably would invite a spate of developers' suits.

Grossman represents Edward Schlies who is suing Pleasanton for 11 sewer connections. The attorney asked the city council to settle the matter last week, but the council refused on a 4-0 vote (Mayor Ed Kinney absent).

Grossman thinks that continuation of his suit against the city could result in overturn of the 1972 sewer agreement and that's a good reason for the city to settle out of court, he said. At the most, only two other properties are situated in the same circumstances as Schlies and it would "cost" the city perhaps four more sewer connections to settle with Schlies, said Grossman.

Scheidig, who was unavailable for comment Tuesday, said yesterday that he was "sorry to see Grossman trying the case in the newspapers."

"I don't think neither he nor I can say what Judge Bostick will do. It is pure speculation on his part to say what action will be taken by the judge. The same thing happened in the Longview case, and the judge decided in our favor, based on the facts. Grossman is merely making press," said Scheidig.

The facts of the case, according to Scheidig, is that Schlies' medical building on Santa Rita Road sewers to the VCSD plant so the city does not have to grant Schlies sewer connections in the Sunol plant. Grossman contends that a letter from Kinney stated that the land sewered to the Sunol plant and "because of it Schlies spent $8,000 on sewer lateral lines to hook up to the plant when connections were opened to the plant in April, 1975."

The Kinney letter doesn't mean anything, said Scheidig. The fact is the land sewers to VCSD. Also the $8,000 figure is incorrect, said Scheidig. Schlies paid only $2,000 for lateral lines, the remaining $6,000 going for storm drains which must be installed with development anyway.

The lateral lines would have been necessary anyway eventually, said Scheidig, no matter which sewer plant served the Schlies parcel. Schlies medical building is on a holding tank and a provision of the holding tank agreement he signed with the city stated he would have to install sewer laterals, said Scheidig.

Far from costing the city "only four more sewer connections" as Grossman contended, it would cost the city much more, said Scheidig. There are many more parcels conceivably in or potentially akin to the circumstances of the Schlies parcel and many more sewer connections would be involved, said Scheidig.

In addition if Judge Bostick were to rule that the 11 Schlies connections were to be taken out of the 200 VCSD connections now going begging north of Interstate 580, it could invite lawsuits from other developers who are high on the priority list and would claim they were bumped in favor of Schlies, said Scheidig.

Rebuts Brandes

McLain fires back

PLEASANTON — Councilman Roger McLain fired back at council challenger Frank Brandes yesterday, saying that Brandes should "take more time with his homework" before he makes accusations.

The exchange of statements began a couple of weeks ago when McLain called on the Associated Building Industry of Northern California to use its good offices to persuade developers from filing lawsuits against the city over sewer connections.

It's a good thing to reason with the developers, especially if you can get them to call off their lawsuits, but McLain had two years on the planning commission and nearly a year on the city council to actually do something about it, Brandes charged yesterday in The Times. Instead of trying to ameliorate the situation. McLain made it worse by voting for renewal of developers' subdivision maps, said Brandes.

McLain told The Times yesterday that Brandes "demonstrated his innocence with regard to what can and cannot be done with zoning applications and/or submitted tract maps. I would only suggest that he take more time with his homework and also discuss allegations such as these with someone more knowledgeable than he is on these subjects so that he won't appear so naive.

"I hope also that this campaign will not degenerate into a mudslinging contest between candidates just so that they can get their names in print. I beleive we can accomplish more for our community if we are to stay with the facts on those issues raised and let our citizens choose those that best offer representation and experience," said McLain.

Brandes commented in The Times yesterday on McLain's call for ad-hoc citizen advisory committees to get more citizens involved with government. He wondered why McLain didn't call for them early in the city's discussion of redevelopment .

McLain told The Times yesterday that in fact he did get citizen input early in the redevelopment discussion. After formation of the agency more than a year ago, but prior to issuance of the proposed redevelopment plan, McLain met with homeowners' groups and got their input.

Asked about Brandes' allegations that McLain and other city official officials made things worse by renewing tract maps, McLain said it is easy to do second-guessing after the fact.

"For a long time, the planning commission had flexibility on tract maps only on design review. The commission looked at the map to see that it met state-mandated requirements. As long as it met those requirements, we could not turn down those maps.

"It was only in recent history that we have been able to use the lack of sewer capacity to politely turn down a map because of the threat to the health and welfare of the citizens," said McLain.

Brandes' charges that he voted for tract maps were vague, said McLain.

"If I voted for renewal on a tract map, it was because it was something the city desired or it was legally impossible not to vote for it. Frank really ought to do his homework and talk about something specific to hang his hat on and stick to the facts," said McLain.

Ma Bell changed some rates Monday

Pacific Telephone inaugurated Monday a series of changes in its rate structure. designed to make sure phone users pay for service they receive, but don't get charged for something they don't use.

Valley residents will be affected in different ways by the changes.

If you live in Dublin-San Ramon and subscribe to "measured rate service," the plan establishes a charge of one message unit for up to five minutes of initial conversation, and an additional message unit for each five minute period (or fraction) thereafter.

The change was instituted because the previous rate structure failed to distinguish between a one message unit charge for a five minute call and a one message unit charge for a six hour call.

This change does not apply to customers with unlimited, flatrate service.

It does not affect Livermore. Pleasanton. or Sunol residences or businesses.

Other changes which will affect all valley residents, depending upon their service needs, include:

•All direct-dialed long distance calls within California will be timed in one-minute increments, rather than the previous "first three minutes and each minute thereafter."

According to phone company officials, people who call long distance and talk for less than three minutes will save money.

Those who call long distance for more than three minutes are likely to see an increase in charges.

•Telephone installation service will be charged on the basis of services required, rather than a flat fee as previously charged.

Dick Piepenburg, manager of the Livermore Pacific Telephone business office, said this will distribute the costs more accurately.

"The average installation of telephone service has run the phone company about $65, when the customer was billed only about $30. The new system will charge those customers requiring complex service a higher amount," Piepenburg said. "We want to put the charges where the cost is."

•Services charges for TouchTone phones will be changed. The old rate was $1.60 per month for one or more residential phones. The new rate is $1.45 per month for the first phone, and 25 cents per month for each additional phone.

If you have one TouchTone phone, your charge will go down. If you have more than one TouchTone phone, your rate will go up.

•Rates for long distance calls made from a pay telephone, and paid at that phone, will go up.

•Charges will be instituted for such services as making a number change, placing a phone on "vacation rate," or suspending service at the customer's request.

•Installation of Wide Area Telephone Service (WATS) line will increase to $50.

One advantage to the new system is an extension of the special Night Rate (the lowest rate) to include the entire period from 11 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Sunday.

All these changes were approved on Dec. 30 by the California Public Utilities Commission, and took effect Jan. 5.

Under the new system, it is possible for phone customers to save money in certain cases. But, as Piepenburg said, it "all depends on your calling pattern."

Telephone customers will have to watch their calls carefully, or they may see increases in their phone bills.

PLEASANTON — A Union City man arrested Monday for alleged possession of pot was the first such arrest in the valley under the state's new marijuana decriminalization law.

Daniel Joseph Goodman, 23, of Union City, was arrested Monday at 4:45 p.m. on Vineyard at First Street after a citizen complained of a man apparently intoxicated on drugs in the street.

Police said Goodman had difficulty understanding simple questions and could not produce personal identification. Ofc. Craig Veteran then noticed a baggie of suspected marijuana protruding from the man's pants pocket.

Goodman was arrested and taken to the police station where he was issued a notice to appear in court. He was then released.

Lt. Dave Freeman said the man was arrested because he couldn't produce identification and was intoxicated. He added that arrests were part of the citation-issuance process.

A copy of the citation will be forwarded to the district attorney who will decide on further action in the case.

'Mutual agreement'

LAVMA report due

PLEASANTON — Progress on the development of a "mutually satisfactory agreement" on wastewater management between Zone 7 and the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency will be reviewed at LAVWA's Thursday meeting, 7:30 p.m. in the Pleasanton Justice Court, 30 W. Angela St.

Representatives of the two agencies met Dec. 18 to discuss efforts toward mutual cooperation on wastewater management in the valley.

LAVWA told the zone its principle concern was wastewater management in the "grey" areas — urbanizing areas adjacent to but not included in LAVWA's service area.

Zone representatives asked LAVWA to furnish the zone with a definition of "adjacent lands" and further requested each participating LAVWA member (Pleasanton, Livermore and the Valley Community Services District) to define its adjacent lands.

LAVWA board members will review new flow projections for the proposed wastewater disposal pipeline.

Earlier staff projections called for a 23 million gallons per day capacity pipeline.

The LAVWA staff reviewed its figures with projections furnished by the three LAVWA agencies and revised their figure downward to 15 mgd.

LAVWA board chairwoman Lila Euler said she expected the board to review the projections, but indicated final approval of the figures was unlikely.

Arrangements for the public hearing on the environmental impact statement on Jan. 13 will be discussed.

LAVWA has not received comments on the EIS from the cities or counties. These comments, Euler said, are critical.

Responses have been received from a number of interested agencies, but Euler said no action has been taken as a result of the comments

Pleasanton schools nix teaching VP

PLEASANTON — The Pleasanton Joint School District has elected not to have a teaching vice principal at Harvest Park Middle School this year.

Carl Krause, assistant superintendent for personnel, said a selection committee at the school decided to hold the position in abeyance and consider it again for 1976-77.

Harvest Park has two administrators, principal Dale Hudson and assistant principal Bob Tanghe.

The school houses students in grades five through eight.

The teaching vice principal position was formalized for a second year in late November. The district issued a position description and proceeded to screen applicants at each district school.

As it turned out, only one change was made in the roster of teaching vice principals from 1974-75 — that of Lee Zachariades at Valley View School.

Other TVPs in effect reappointed include Del Warren, Alisal; Kay Bolles, Fairlands; Ron Dell 'Immagine, Pleasanton Middle School; Phyllis Clark, Vintage Hills; Tom Ingham, Walnut Grove.

The other change made by the district was to redesignate vice principals as assistant principals.

The move to continue the TVP positions had drawn fire from Amador Valley Teacher Association last spring.

In their meet and confer statement to the board, the group requested that all persons designated teaching vice principals be reassigned full-time to the class room to ease class sizes.

Subsequent pleas to the board and administration were turned back.

The unit participates in the East-West Football game with the benefits going to the Shriners Hospital for crippled children. Mullins has been a Pleasanton businessman since 1971 and presently operates the Wagon Whell Bar and Restaurant on Main Street with his brother.

Fair executive proposes unique farmers' market

Utilization of California fairs as markets for farm commodities has been advanced by a Western Fairs Association executive.

Robert R. Stein, recently appointed executive vice president of the WFA, has challenged agricultural marketers "to take advantage of the direct exchange possible with the millions of California families who attend the 83 state, district, citrus and county fairs."

Stein had advanced the idea several months ago during a WFA area meeting held at the Alameda County Fairgrounds in Pleasanton. At the time it brought little reaction.

It has not been discussed by County Fair Association directors and Fair officials had no comment on it when the subject was broached Tuesday.

Stein suggests that fair facilities be used as direct market outlets for farm produce. To make such a "farmers' market" work at each locality, he indicated these farm commodities must be in excess of prime market demands and within easy hauling distance from farm to fair. "The market for this excessive production would be found if a substantial number of poor families lived in the area served by the fair," Stein contends.

"Today there is an initial $400,000 pilot Farmers' Market project being built at the Merced County Fairgrounds in Merced," reports Stein. "But, it probably won't take an expenditure anywhere near that size to get a farmers' market going on many fair grounds in California. Most fairs already have large, well-lighted and ventilated barns with wide asphalt aisles and plenty of running water into which mounted booths could be placed to sell fresh produce."

Leland H. Ruth, writing in a column for the Agricultural Council of California, claims "Farmers have long been the victims of surplus commodity programs resulting in lower prices."

Would this new approach proposed by the Western Fairs Association disrupt the delicate structure of the markets that agriculture has fought to establish?

Stein partially answers agriculture's questions in his remarks. "It's my understanding that several states already have tried direct marketing and without apparent damage to the primary or secondary market that is in their states."

Stein calculates that his direct market approach would supplement commodity promotion programs because it would be a "Complimentary alternative to straight media advertising and applied research. In addition, he points out that "only through participation in fairs is there an opportunity for 'two-way street' kinds of communication with the whole family unit."

He concluded that if the state, the various fairs and the commodity groups could "reach out this year to develop some carefully planned pilot programs utilizing the facilities fairs have to offer, it will be one small step for fairs and agriculture by the genesis of one giant step for our customers ... the consumers of California."

Community concerns eyes new structure

PLEASANTON — The Community Concerns Committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the justice court to consider the proposed restructuring of the committee.

The city staff has suggested the revised committee be composed of five citizens and three members of city commissions. In addition efforts would be made to gain the full-time services of an Associated Community Action Program staff person to head a social services department.

The expanded scope of the CCC is intended to help implement the social services element of the city's general plan.

The CCC also will consider 10 proposals before ACAP/ACTEB involving all of south county, including Pleasanton.

Dublin artist transforms home into showplace

By REINA WHITNEY

A breath of Vienna has found its way into Dublin, bringing with it delicate beauty, imaginative talents and European flavor.

Artist Doreet Naidus has transformed a Silvergate tract home into a cosmopolitan showplace of impeccable taste. From the time you enter her front door and spot the free standing Grecian statue in front of a lighted lattice wall insert, holding an urn of flowing wandering jew, you know you've entered into another world.

The white tiled entry blends with the plush white carpeting accented by gold, black, dark browns and abundant greenery. At 10 a.m. there was an inviting fire in the fireplace and coffee for two served from a silver carafe. The sunken living room is surrounded by Doreet's beautiful paintings. A grand piano graces one corner and the room is centered with an unusual chandelier of heavy wood and smoked glass. Another crystal chandelier tops the mediterranean table in the dining area.

Pots and pans of copper hang from the kitchen ceiling with promises of European cuisine. Doreet admits to being a "good cook" as readily as admitting to being a talented artist. It has nothing to do with ego — it's just a statement of fact. Not having tasted her culinary renderings, it's apparent her artistic endeavors are quite noteworthy.

Her garage has been transformed into an artist's dream studio. Wall-to-wall carpeting, peg-board finished walls, florescent lighting all form a background for the prolific artist.

Her art training started early, when her mother, recognizing her unusual talent, put her into art classes in her native Vienna before she was ten years old. Later she was pulled out, because the school started using nude models. After her family migrated to New York City, Doreet studied with the New York Art Student's League and at Brooklyn College. Calling herself a "professional student" she says she is always taking classes to better her technique and learn from others. She started with oils, but lately has been working almost exclusively with watercolors.

She specializes in figure studies. Michael Crain, a New York critic, said of her work after an exhibit in the Gotham Galleries of that city, that "she is a possessor of essentially personal approach." He goes on to say that "she captures the warmth and feeling of her subject and translates it into a meaningful aesthetic expression."

This is especially true of one of her latest paintings which she has entitled "Noreen" and recently exhibited at The Liberty House Valley Artists show.

It's a pensive study of a young girl, all in tones of brown, in which she has produced a quiet lyrical mood of unusual interest through the use of delicately balanced nuances.

Although scenic interpretations are not Doreet's forte, she admits she has fallen in love with the scenic wonderland in which she now lives and would like to do some studies of "The Dublin Hills." She has convinced her mother and her brother to move here. Her family came because of her husband Arnold's company transfer.

This is her first experience with living in a house as opposed to a city apartment. She says it's a little different doing everything yourself when back east all she did was call the "super" when even a fuse needed changing.

Her children, who have also been encouraged by their mother to pursue the arts, find the pace of Dublin much slower and so quiet compared to New York.

Her oldest daughter, Noreen, a 15-year-old Dublin High School Sophomore attended the American Aademy of Dramatic Arts before coming here. She appeared as Dorothy in one of their productions of "Wizard of Oz." Locally she has had bit parts in "The Boyfriend" and "My Fair Lady."

Both Noreen and her 13-year-old sister, Emily, take weekly ballet lessons. Their mother hopes to enter them into repertory in San Francisco and is anxious for them to enter into local productions.

Not to be outdone by all the feminine talent with which he's surrounded, her husband Arnold, plays that grand piano in the living room and also composes music. He writes poetry and fiction for a hobby and "would do it full time if he could make a living at it" says Doreet.

She has allowed him a corner of her garage studio for his typewriter.

Doreet Naidus, Dublin artist, shown in her garage-converted studio, holds one of her latest paintings entitled "Noreen."

A graceful Grecian statue, nestled in a latticed niche, holding an urnful of flowing ivy, greets the visitor to Doreet Naidus' Silvergate home.

Boycotting church opens own school

By ALAN FISHLEDER
Times Staff Writer

WEST PITTSBURG — Some 25 children involved in a church boycott of several area schools last month are now attending a new school operated by the United Pentecostal Church here.

Classes opened Monday in the new school at the church as the County Counsel's office still had not filed a suit authorized by the trustees of the Pittsburg Unified School District to resolve the conflict which prompted the boycott.

Students, who had attended West Pittsburg campuses of the Mt. Diablo Unified School District, have also enrolled at the church school.

Chrch members contend that their children should not be required to watch educational television and movies in class.

The three-week boycott ended after school trustees voted Dec. 17 to allow the children to be excused from the audio visual program until courts decide the case.

The Rev. Jack Edwards, minister of the church and leader of the boycott, explained why church members started the school.

The courts might rule that children must watch the programs in public schools, he said.

"There's a question mark about the whole thing. The board's action is only temporary. We didn't want to take any chances," Edwards said.

A court decision might not come for several months. "The time has come to act," he added.

"We've had to act very fast, but we've done everything about the school legally," Edwards said.

He said children would get a better education in the church school than in public schools.

"It's a God and country school, all red, white and blue," he said.

The congregation completed construction of a new church last year.

Teachers are required to belong to the Pentecostal religion. The cost of supporting the school will be a burden on the church and the parents.

January programs sparse at fair

With the exception of a couple trailer rallys, the schedule of events at the County Fairgrounds for the current month is sparse.

The Wheelabouts have a trailer rally planned this weekend and Hook-Um-Up Trailer Club has a similar event scheduled for Jan. 16-17.

With the Foothill High basketball teams having a brand new gym to practice in, Granada High having moved back in to a repaired facility and no semi-professional basketball activity (ala the Tri-Valley Warriors of last season), the Exhibition Hall is devoid of athletic activity.

The Ewa Tom Lin Kinnh Appaloosa Club plans a stallion parade on Sunday, Jan. 25 and California Auction Sales has a horse auction slated Sunday, Jan. 18.

Other events slated this month include Jeannie Rathbone antique auction on Jan. 14-15, Camp Fire Girls slumber party Jan. 16 and 17, Fiat America autocross Sunday, Jan. 18, Lloyd L. Lowry benefit stage show and Trowel Club crab feed, both on Saturday, Jan. 31.

Regular events scheduled include Tri-Valley Royalaires practices, San Jose Police Department driver training classes, and Pleasanton Recreation Department dog training classes.

The letter is from Nick Reckas, retired fabric salesman and avid traveler. It is in response to a Dec. 22 Time article on world poverty.

Reckas, a resident of 3661 Touriga Drive, wrote:

"Tell the Third World to stop exploding and instead do some thinking. I did. In my father's house there were 11 of us — not enough food most of the time.

"In my house, only four of us — more than enough food It is as simple as that."

Adult education classes available

The Amador Valley Adult Education Program still has many openings in its winter classes.

Registration will be held Jan. 12 through 15 Classes will be held at Dublin High School on Monday and Wednesday evenings, and at Amador High School on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. They run from 7 to 10 p.m.

Public education needs boosters

Elsewhere on this page there are published two letters in response to The Times' recent disclosures on "the competition private schools are giving the Valley's public school system."

One of those letters is from Richard Chandler, principal of the Christian Center School which draws enrollment from these several communities to its Dublin-based institution. Mr. Chandler is anxious to assure us of his own support of public education, and to reassure us on the question of private school competition to that public system ... "less than 4 percent of the school enrollment from kingergarten through twelfth grade" is handled by the Valley's private institutions."

In another — and perhaps more important — comment, Patricia Wartenberg writes as one parent who has warm praise for the public school (in the Murray District) which now affords her child an "exciting" learning experience. We would like to believe that countless other families enjoy that same kind of relationship with their school, and it would be nice to hear such praise more often.

Perhaps our series on the private schools will do just that — stir up the taxpayers to a new sense of pride and understanding in the biggest, the most costly and the most important "business" that functions within any one of our several communities.

Perhaps we will even bring school trustees and administrators and teachers to a new level of pride in their role, and that in turn will result in happier, more competent students. And if all that happens, then private education won't be "the only alternative" for a growing number of Valley families.

But that is not the picture today. Private schools have, in just a few years, doubled their appeal within this Valley. Our information indicates that such enrollment could be doubled again, in less than 24 months.

That is the information The Times sought to share with our readers. It is a startling, even alarming trend that warrants careful review by every parent, particulary those who — like Mrs. Wartenberg — want to see public education grow and prosper as the lifeline for those thousands of our children who can have no alternative.

Letters to the Times

Classroom praise

Editor, The Times:

I am writing in defense of the public schools in our valley. The recent articles in The Times about the growth in private school attendance either stated or strongly suggested this trend has been brought about by the lack of educational achievement, discipline and moral teachings in our schools.

My son attends Lydiksen school in the Murray School District. My husband and I have both been impressed by not only the quality of the teaching he has received but, even more significantly, by the motivation for learning that his teachers have instilled in him. He loves to go to school, he comes home excited by what he has learned and he is willing to work at improving his weaknesses.

His attitudes obviously grew in an atmosphere where learning is not only pursued but is also fun for the children, and where discipline can not be a problem of any significance. Home is the place where our children should learn discipline and the moral conduct we expect of them; school is where they should be educated and intellectually stimulated. It appears to us that Lydiksen School is succeeding.

Patricia Wartenberg

Private schools

Editor, The Times:

As principal of Christian Center School, I would like to go on record as being one who favors a strong public institution in education. I would like to commend the thousands of educators throughout this valley who have dedicated their lives and resources that children might be brought up possessing the tools to enrich their own lives and that of the community.

Private schools account for less than 4% of the school enrollment from kindergarten through twelfth grade in the Tri-Valley area. Christian Center School, as well as other private institutions, seeks only to provide an educational opportunity for those parents who desire a particular kind of learning experience based on loving Christian discipline, parental support and a place where prayer and Biblical studies can be offered in the freedom of enterprise which our Constitution and tradition provides.

Christian Center School, as well as others, are not a threat to Public Education, nor is it encroaching upon it. We offer a perspective in education and a focus on moral principles which is desirable and even necessary if freedom of thought, variety of culture, and the strength of diversity, are to continue in the American tradition.

Our school, for one, has enjoyed the support of many of the teachers in the Valley area over the past five years and in turn, has sought to support the many fine programs which the school system provides. We hope to continue in the spirit of mutual support and yet maintain the distinctives of Christian education.

Fundamental quiz

Editor, The Times:

Parents in Livermore of K-6 school-age children will this week be receiving a questionnaire. This will survey interest unfortunately in only a one-site fundamental school.

This concept now more than six months old in Livermore is a classic example of the kind of rigid, locked in thinking that humans can indulge in.

This plan has continued to be patterned after Pasadena. Pasadena, however, has forced school busing and empty school buildings. Livermore has neither of these situations. Nor do we even have public transportation. Moreover, we believe in neighborhood schools.

The questionnaire being sent out does not survey interest in having a fundamental school as an alternate program at the neighborhood schools. This is what Pleasanton ... has done: a fundamental school exists as a school- within - a - school where less-structured and conventional education are also possibilities.

Supt. Croce has said that parents interested in a 3-in-1 program can write in that preference as an answer to question IV. Write-in choices are a difficult way to go politically. But let's take Mr. Croce at his word and answer question IV: "Where do you want the fundamental school located?" with "We want the fundamental school as an alternative at our neighborhood school."

Right now when I think of the disruptions of staff, parents and children alike, the destruction of neighborhood schools, the parade of private cars driving kids to a one-site fundamental school facing a stream of cars driving kids away from such a choice, I realize that the gasoline-station owners will be the only winners!

FOCUS/School business

A 900-mile ream

Our schools have become a big business ... by their own admission.

For 1975-76, the respective boards of the Amador Valley Joint High School District and Pleasanton Joint School District have adopted budgets which total some $14.6 million for the operation of the educational programs under their jurisdiction.

And from texts to tacos, the costs are going up while the sources of revenues are virtually leveling off.

The Amador Valley district, which includes campuses at Dublin, Foothill, Valley continuation in Dublin and Amador Valley in Pleasanton, because of its size and large assessed valuation, receives the major support for its program from local taxpayers with almost 65 per cent of the income from that source. The State of California provides some 31 per cent, with the remainder made up with Federal support.

According to the Amador-Pleasanton publication, "Your Schools," approximately 78 per cent of each educational dollar is spent in this area. That figure (for the Amador district) is topped by the elementary district's 89 per cent.

From the remaining dollars, the school districts maintain one of the larger corporate activities in the Amador-Livermore Valley.

To illustrate just how big a corporate activity, we will quote extensively from the latest "Your Schools" publication.

The districts employ a total of 983 regular and part-time people in support of the program. Amador has under contract 336 certificated employes and 181 classified personnel. Pleasanton has 284 certificated employes and 178 in non-teaching positions.

Thus, it follows that the lion's share of the budget is earmarked to employe compensation.

Between 80 and 85 percent of the budgets, in fact.

The community has a large investment in the school plants and equipment. The replacement cost for insurance purposes in the Amador Valley High School District of all buildings and equipment is 13.9 million, and $10.2 million in the Pleasanton district. These figures do not include the worth of the land which is not assessed and, therefore, not insured.

Amador and Pleasanton serve a combined total of 10,500 youngsters.

To facilitate the educational program, a central supply warehouse is maintained at Parks with stocks of art, athletic equipment, health and classroom supplies — together with the paper necessary for the program.

Presently, there are some 10,000 reams of paper on hand for use in 1975-76 which, if laid end to end, would stretch approximately 900 miles through this valley.

The districts' payrolls have a significant impact upon the commercial economy of the area. And like any other $14 million corporation, they demand a fiscal services staff and decision-making board of directors with exceptional management skills.

It is the latter body, in the form of boards of trustees, that carry the greatest responsibility ... not only to see that the "business" remains solvent and on a positive, forward course, but is accessible and responsive to the corporate "stock holders"... you and I.

Beautiful Yule for those who gave

Editor, The Times:

The Pleasanton Junior Women's Club and the Pleasanton Jaycee Wives would like to express our appreciation to the people of Pleasanton for their help with the Community Christmas Program. This year we supplied food and/or gifts for 54 families, with 85 adults and 139 children being helped. A total of $849.40 was collected from the community and $941.02 was spent on staple foods, meat certificates and mailing expenses; fortunately, some money had been left from last year so that we were able to reach the goals we set ourselves.

The Jaycee Wives spent an additional $240 from their funds to buy gifts for children whose tags were not taken from the "gift trees" at Sprouse Retiz and the First National Bank of Pleasanton.

Special thank you's go to Dean's Cafe for offering dinner to 130 people, Kirth Furniture for six $50 food orders, Cole's Market for two more $50 food orders, Straw Hat Pizza for a special "Pizza Night," Lucky's and Irby's for 10% discounts, and Frank Vassallo for donating the fresh produce. Thanks, too, to the elementary and junior high schools for the most successful canned food drives in past years and to the many anonymous people who bought gifts for the gift trees.

Monetary donations which are so badly needed came from: Scotty's Printing, the V.I.P. Club of Pleasanton, Flowers n' Things, Dermody and O'Brien Dental Corporation, Lucky Stores, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Faris, the Pleasanton Women's Club, the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club, Dr. Guy C. Clark, Dr. Glafkides, Dr. A. Gordon Larsen, First National Bank of Pleasanton, Pleasanton Bakery, Courier-Citizen Co., Scholastic Book Services, Struthers and Harris, IOOF Pleasanton Lodge No. 255, Dr. Harry W. Plett, Mr. and Mrs. James Bethel, the Photo Plant, Lion's Club, Pleasanton Auto Service, Amador Linen Rental, Warren M. Annis Agency, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Moller, Amador 4-H Club, VFW Ambrose Regalia Post No. 6298, Robert C. Attebery, Pi Rho Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, Kolln Hardware, Inc., Mrs. McGraw, Morrison Homes, Judy Phinney, William Gale, and Vintage Realty.

Gifts of food, clothing or supplies were received from: Liberty House, Mannings Donuts, Bank of America, Mrs. Poropat's Girl Scout Troop, Mrs. Huntze, B & B Rentals, Campfire Girls, Red Cross, Bluebirds, Golden Hills 4-H Club, Delta Gamma Omega Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Philcox, Village Manufacturing, Exchange Club, Heights 4-H Club, Castlewood members, Marilyn McClure, Steve Neves, Opal Collings, Presbyterian Church Deacons, Arboleda 4-H Club, Fairlands Junior Girl Scout Troop No. 168, and Mrs. Berberian's Bluebirds.

Because of the generosity of the people of this community, Christmas was made much brighter for the families served. We hope each reader will find it in their hearts to remember the needy all through the year, and to share what they can through the Christmas Program next year.

Round the town

Raising the price of a postage stamp by some 30 percent is no laughing matter. Not when you are in the business of communications, and the flow of information is essential to your daily labors.

"Mail use could fall off as much as 30 percent," said one high authority in sizing up impact of the higher postal rates. He's in the mail order business. The U.S. Mails are even more important to those folks than to us journalists. After all, we can always make something up at the last minute. Not so with the mail order houses.

Year or so ago there was a big outcry about "the junk mail" that was filling up the nation's mail boxes. Laws were passed. People were given the right to have their names removed from any and all of those mail order lists. Result? Almost as many asked to have their names ADDED to the list as there were those wanting to be deleted. So the junkies are still in business.

But this big boost in postal rates is something else again. Not just for them that sends out the stuff. For many Americans Third Class Mail is the high point of the day. A fascinating array of offers, discounts, invites, you name 'em.

At our house the race to the mail box has become something of a silly game. She always insists on getting there first. I could care less. Besides which, first three times I tried to outrace her to the daily mail, my left knee gave out. Now it's no contest. Let her have the blessed stuff.

"Lots of interesting goodies today," she announces, peeling off the envelopes of various sizes and colors as she mounts the front steps. "Something from Sunset Magazines, a catalogue from Saks, and this large one from California Trucking Association."

I never have liked being read to. Even at mail call. Reminds me of service with the Allied Forces during WW II. Didn't care much for the drill sergeant then, either.

"It's another set of their delightful drawings of vintage trucks," she announces, ripping open the California Truckers envelope with gusto.

I am not enthused. Every year the Truckers send us a brace of vintage drawings. Every year she's enthused ... to the point of hauling those renderings down to the Art & Frame Shop. The Truckers' "gift" winds up costing me a King's ransome.

"Sunset Magazines wants you to buy the new 'California Coast' book for $14.95," she announces. "But that's the same book they sent free ... for you to review two months ago."

So far I am ahead $14.95 on the Sunset book I won't have to buy, but behind $18 on the set of frames she must get for those blessed vintage truck drawings. Net deficit: $3.05. Not bad, for the first mail of '76.

"Reader's Digest has another one of those big giveaways," the household mail thief reveals. "$100 per month for life," it says.

"Your life or mine," I inquire, fondling the sharp end of the letter opener which I have yet to use.

"There's a nice little interest payment here from the Savings and Loan," she says, ignoring my thrust a-la letter opener. "That should help with our income tax payment."

What it will probably do is move us up a notch on the IRS hit parade. The more you make, the more they take. It's a losing battle.

"What's that brown envelope there?" I ask, easing closer to the day's haul.

"It's from 'Funeral Expense Information' ... something to do with getting Social Security to pay for your burial."

"That could be the first good news of the year," I advise her, testing the edge on the letter opener. "Does it say what year you have to be buried in?"

By now she is lost in the Trucking Association art, and I have managed to get one hand on the Saks Fifth Avenue catalogue.

"Wowee!!" I exclaim. "Some of the modeling in these underwear sections is worse than the nudy art the Postal Service used to ban, back in my time."

"It's not meant for male readers with dirty minds," she says, relieving me of the Saks' sex piece.

"So far it's the only thing in the mail that hasn't cost me money," I assert. "You should be pleased I've found something to amuse me, and that we can afford."

"I wonder sometimes how they can afford to mail out all these things," she says, pensively. "Particularly with these higher postage costs."

"I wouldn't worry about it, cutie," says I. "As long as they have this connection with the picture framers and the funeral parlors, Third Class Mail is here to stay."

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

The tumult and the shouting are not over, not in Pittsburgh nor in far away Dallas, the place where they shoot presidents and murder the English language.

All of which is fine for Dallas and Pittsburgh.

The cheers have died in Pleasanton, dissolved into disgruntled mumbling in the Dublin pubs, crystallized into meaningless conversations in the Livermore coffee shops.

There is no joy on Oakport Street this cold January day. Close only counts in horseshoes and other unmentionable pastimes. The stark fact is Cliff Branch did not get out and allow the Oakland Raiders time for one more play, one last crack at making August's dream come true.

He lost the sidelines Sunday somewhere in the chaotic crowd which had overflowed from those home town stands and jammed the playing field with tumultous humanity.

Suddenly he was a young man with no place to go except home.

Now Johnny Madden, the King Sized Squire of Pleasanton, is sitting in a house perched on a hillside just below Foothill Road and meditating on the cruel fate which let footballs drop from the normally sure hands of Marv Hubbard and Pete Banaszak and telling anyone who will listen he is "proud of his boys, proud of the whole damn 60 minutes."

Across the muddy waters a sharp witted laddie with more hair on his chin than the top of his head and something sticking in his craw about Madden is suggesting in a not too subtle manner that the squire is not quite up to par where football coaching is concerned and perhaps should concentrate his efforts forthwith to parchesi.

In Dublin and across the county line in San Ramon where the hoi polloi gather at the San Ramon Country Club a real estate man who has no reason for hating Madden other than that his seats at the Coliseum are not quite what he wanted is suggesting bluntly that the Raider coach be hoisted on his own petard and ridden out of town astride a rail.

Meanwhile Al Davis, the genius general manager of the Raiders, is explaining he did not say what Dave Anderson, a sports writer for the New York Times, said he said.

Which is the way things go in this something less than green valley when the fun of football's fine Sunday afternoons is only a memory and there is nothing to look forward to except sweaty summer afternoons in Santa Rosa.

Meanwhile, winter is really winter and a lousy one at that with all cold and no rain and no Super Bowl except of course in Dallas and Pittsburgh and maybe Miami where the game is played, but not on Oakport Street and certainly not in the Livermore-Amador-San Ramon Valley where many of the Raiders and their coaches live.

We must wait until next year, to coin a phrase, and the folks will always be with us who will blame the flaming haired squire for the wait which now seems endless.

I, for one, do not blame Madden I admire the big man and the way he holds his job and manages to rise above his detractors if not ignore them.

I blame Franco Harris for his unpardonable 25 yard run into touchdown land.

I blame Joe Greene for having the discourtesy to show up at the ball park in full uniform and ready to play after some weeks.

I blame the folks responsible for controlling Sunday's crowd and let them stroll out to the sidelines so Cliff Branch would lose them when he needed them most.

But if I am to blame anyone more than others it would have to be Lady Luck and Fate's fickle finger which did not beckon to the Raiders Sunday.

Everyone in the United States who knows anything about football will admit the Steelers are one of the great football teams of the last decade, as are the Raiders.

The two teams proved that Sunday.

Anyone with a particle of sense in his head knows that when two great teams meet and the rules being what they are, one of them must lose.

Sunday it was Oakland in one of the closest and best coached games I have ever watched either on the boob tube or in the stands.

The way the ball bounced had something to do with the outcome. The inability of receivers to make their cuts on comeback passes.

But mostly it was two great teams meeting, one of which had to lose.

There are 26 football teams in the National Football League and only two of the quality that appeared in Three Rivers Stadium Sunday.

Think about that when you critiize Johnny Madden and his Raiders.

Lighter Times

There are some heavy responsibilities for those who received green and growing plants for Christmas.

Their chief responsibility, of course, is to see that the plants remain green and growing. I have never received a plant for Christmas, nor do I want one. But an associate of mine, one William Cauble, has been in this situation.

A busy reporter probably doesn't have time to tend to his or her plants as he or she should and that's probably Cauble's excuse and a good one, too. But some day, with the green revolution coming to power, it may be that plants-laughter will become as serious a crime as man-slaughter or person-slaughter, whatever you prefer. It is in this spirit I offer the following "news" stories which really are visions of the future by Cauble and another Times reporter, Pat Kennedy.

Kennedy, who presented Cauble with one of his plants, writes first.

"PLEASANTON — William Cauble, 23, of Oakland, was arraigned in Superior Court today on charges of willfully slaughtering two green friends, Christmas C. Cactus and Pot Ted Coleus.

"Cauble pleaded 'nolo contendere' to charges of starvation, deprivation of water and willful neglect of potting conditions. He is expected to be sentenced to a year in a cell surrounded by man-eating flytraps."

Cauble's reply, also datelined Pleasanton, follows.

"In an unprecedented action, William Cauble today watered his few remaining plants. Criticism had mounted in the past as to the frequency of the precious replenishment. Pressure finally forced Cauble to get off his dictionary and water the annoying beasts."

Violence to plants could be the new crime wave of the 1970's, as our writers suggest. Be careful your trailing azaleas don't get mugged when they go out for a walk at night.

When you first use the Jacoby transfer, don't bother with transfers to the minor suits. Just use these artificial reponses to a notrump opening.

Two clubs — Stayman. Opener bids two of a four-card or longer major suit. Otherwise two diamonds.

Two diamonds. Transfer to hearts. Guarantees at least five hearts.

Two hearts, transfer to spades. Guarantees at least five spades.

One real advantage of the transfer bid is that you can transfer with a bad hand. Thus, North responds two hearts. South rebids two spades. He is annoyed when North drops him there, but is really delighted when play is over and he has made two spades right on the nose.

Without the transfer bid, North might still bid two spades and play the hand there, but there is a good chance that South will like his hand so much that he will bid again and get his side too high.

Ask the Jacobys

A reader wants to know if the new rules for duplicate apply to rubber bridge.

The answer is that they do not as yet, but there will be new rubber bridge laws in 1976 or 1977. Laws commissions move slowly their wonders (?) to perform.

Foreman faces key bout

Midst the glory and grief of Olympiads past, ABC Television replayed George Foreman's impromptu flag waving ceremony from Mexico City Monday night as a prelude to the upcoming 1976 winter and summer games.

The sight of a young brutish heavyweight from Houston and the Pleasanton Job Corps pummeling Russian Iones Chepulis, then holding aloft a tiny replica of the Stars and Stripes, was one of the dramatic moments in Olympic history. It also symbolized a milestone in the checkered career of the one-time heavyweight champion. There have been any number of momentous occasions in the life of George Foreman, beginning with the time a Job Corps P.E director named Doc Broadus badgered him to put on boxing gloves.

There was that Olympic gold medal in 1968, and the stunning knockout of Joe Frazier to bring George the heavyweight crown. And of course there was an equally stunning knockout by Muhammad Ali in Zaire which leaves Foreman facing his next milestone. Perhaps it is the most crucial moment in his boxing lifetime.

Foreman will meet Ron Lyle at Caeser's Palace in Las Vegas Jan 24. It will be Foreman's first serious comeback bout since he lost the heavyweight title. A win over Lyle should vault Foreman back to Ali's doorstep. A loss? Well, it could impair his chances of ever meeting Ali again in the ring. It might even eliminate Foreman as a title contender.

So how does the former king of boxing feel in the last 17 days before his career either skyrockets or nose-dives?

"I'm just biding my time," George Foreman reveals in casual, nasal tones brought on by a lingering head cold. "I'm patient right now. It's something you gain through experience.

"I'm just keeping my interest up," Foreman said yesterday from his storefront gym in Livermore. As long as I'm active, I'm all right. Boxing is my thing and I've just got to keep doing it.

"Getting into the loss column won't do me any good," said Foreman when asked the import of the Lyle bout. "I'm going to do everything possible to stay out of the loss column. But then almost contradicting himself, George added; "It's not just winning or losing in this fight, it's looking good and boxing good.

"I'm impressed with Lyle," he said I always have been because he had the same kind of beginning I did. He got a couple of amateur titles and he always had to box hard."

Foreman and his brain trust, Gil Clancy and "Kid" Rapidez, will work out daily in Livermore (with a brief vacation Thursday and Friday) until Jan. 13. Then they'll break camp for Las Vegas and 10 final days of training and aclimatization.

"I'm feeling good," Foreman said "This cold aint gonna stop me. I can't let it. I'm ready to fight right now. In fact I could have fought Lyle that night in San Francisco."

Foreman was referring to an exhibition bout he fought Dec. 17 at Civic Auditorium, a scheduled 10-rounder with a former sparring mate that lasted four rounds.

George fought a similar exhibition in New York at the end of November. "Those fights knocked a lot of rust off me," he said. "Getting in front of a crowd again was good because that's what you get rusty from.

"The strangest thing for me was in San Francisco because I got a standing ovation. I walked into the ring and everybody got up and clapped I didn't feel like beating anybody up after that and I couldn't do anything in the first round. I really had to shake it off. But then in the third round I pushed the guy I was fighting and everybody booed. That was good because it got me ready to fight."

Foreman took a five day break after the Civic bout, then resumed a light training routine through the holiday season. The former champ intended to spend Christmas in Houston with his mother, but the necessity to prepare for Lyle precluded Christmas at home. George spent a quiet Christmas in his quarter-million dollar Livermore house.

Foreman weighs 215 pounds presently, as light as he's been for any fight since whipping Frazier In a title bout with Ken Norton, George came in at 220.

Foreman and Clancy have never admitted concern over the fighter's weight. But he looks leaner, and more fit than at any time since he defeated Norton.

AMADOR GOALIE TAKES THE BALL AGAINST ONRUSHING POKE

Pokes hold off Dons

Amador Valley High attempted to write an Oakland Raider type climax into its soccer match with Livermore yesterday, but the Dons played the Cowboys the way the Raiders usually play the Pittsburgh Steelers — to a defeat.

Amador scored a penalty kick goal five minutes from the finish to kindle hopes of a tie, but Livermore answered by rushing its first unit back into the fray and held on for a 2-1 victory.

The win moved the Cowboys within a breath of the first place Dons, actually, one point away, if you don't like respiratory metaphors.

It also extended Livermore's dominance of the snake-bitten Dons. In the history of the rivalry, Livermore has defeated Amador eight times, lost only two, and tied five.

It's not a magical spell that the Cowboys have weaved, says Don coach Mike Geib. It's just that they have good soccer players.

Goal keeper Pete Howard of Livermore verified Geib's assessment with his play yesterday. The 6-2, 205 senior shut out Amador until five minutes from the finish when Joe Correia was shoved from behind in the penalty area. Correia planted a penalty goal in the bottom left corner of the net to rob Howard of his fifth whitewash this season.

That and a surprising encounter with the goal post were the only downers on an otherwise beautiful afternoon for Howard.

Late in the second half Amador's Casey Clark rammed an airborne Howard, catapulting him into the right post. Pete collapsed in a heap, but played out the game.

"I didn't mind that," said Howard, even though as an all-star football player he is unaccustomed to being shoved around. "I'm just mad about the shutout. He caught me in the ribs with his shoulder," Howard said; "and then I ran into the post. It didn't hurt long. It was just an impact thing and it went right away."

The afternoon could have been more pleasant if the Dons had gone away from his goal in the first half. Though they trailed 2-0 at intermission, the Dons launched three serious scoring challenges at Howard.

After Dennis Martinez put Livermore up 1-0 with a goal five minutes into the match, Amador's Clark split two fullbacks and rifled a low blast at the right post. Howard sprawled to make the save.

Prep cagers open play

EBAL basketball opens another season tonight with the old and the new, nothing borrowed but perhaps somebody blue.

Old rivals Amador Valley and Livermore meet in the Cowboy gym in an early-season indicator of the league's strengths.

Newcomer California High, playing its first varsity season, travels to Dublin.

Title favorite Granada will be at San Ramon attempting to live up to advanced billings.

Foothill, the other new team, can finally stop borrowing everyone else's basketball court as it dedicates the Falcon gym in a game with Monte Vista. They're not sure about heating in the arena, however so fans should bundle up to keep the blue chills away.

All varsity contests begin roughly at 8 p.m. The tipoff is fluid, however, because freshmen play at 5, and the junior varsities at 6:30. No one can make all those kids finish on time.

The games should be worth waiting for, however. Especially the one in Livermore, where the Cowboys, pretenders to the throne, attempt to unseat defending champion Amador.

Livermore carries a 6-2 record into the game and an honorable mention in the polls. It has been rated among the East Bay's top 15 for most of the pre-season.

Amador, conversly, has been ignored due to a 2-6 record. But it's difficult to overlook back-to-back EBAL titles.

The Dons start the march to number three in succession with few experienced players.

Mats belt SR

Adhering to that old saying that the best defense is a good offense, the Granada Matadors rolled to a 3-0 victory over an outmanned San Ramon High team yesterday in a East Bay Athletic League soccer match at Robertson Park in Livermore.

The Matadors had 25 shots on goal to just four for the Wolves as the winners totally dominated the match from beginning to end. San Ramon, which is winless in EBAL competition, failed to get any kind of offensive movement going as Granada kept the ball in San Ramon territory most of the time.

The Matadors scored their first goal with five minutes gone in the first period.

Dave D'Ambra took a pass from Keith Teel. He then fired a hard liner into the nets for the goal.

The score remained 1-0 throughout the remainder of the first half as the Matadors missed several other close shots.

Granada scored its second goal with about four minutes gone in the second period. Shannon Estil took control of the ball at midfield and broke straight down the field before banging the ball into the nets from about 10 yards out.

Estil scored the Matadors' final goal when he took a pass from Manzar Iqbal and slammed one in from five yards out. D'Ambra had set up the score when he stole the ball from a Wolf defender on the sidelines and kicked the ball to Iqbal.

Rams plan changes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of the Los Angeles Rams freely admits the club plans changes for 1976 after losing a second straight National Football Conference championship game and missing the Super Bowl.

"We're going to be doing quite a few things that we feel have to be done," said Rosenbloom. "We just have to get better, that's all there is to it."

The veteran owner, who was head man with the Baltimore Colts before swapping that franchise for the Rams three year ago, added, "What the Dallas Cowboys did to us, I thought we'd do to the Cowboys."

On Sunday before a partisan crowd in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the Rams fell ingloriously to the Cowboys 37-7.

Rosenbloom won't say what changes he envisions, but the toughest problem could be at quarterback. James Harris took over last year when John Hadl was traded to Green Bay.

When Harris was hurt last Dec. 7 at New Orleans, it was reserve Ron Jaworski who brought victories over Green Bay, Pittsburgh and St. Louis. Harris started the championship game but came out after three series — victim of an intercepted pass that led to the first Dallas touchdown and an underthrow on the third series. Jaworski took over.

He might well take over as the starter in 1976 — his third season with the Rams after starring at little known Youngstown State.

In 1972, his first season as owner of the Rams, Rosenbloom kept incumbent coach Tommy Prothro but then fired him after a 6-7-1 season and brought in Chuck Knox with a three-year contract.

Knox guided the Rams to divisional titles and into the NFC playoffs the past two seasons.

This year five of his original starters were out for the season with injuries.

"I hope he'll be my coach as long as I own the Rams," Rosenbloom said of Knox and now they must negotiate a new contract.

Some of the Rams' old timers probably won't be back, but the club awaits the players' decision in some cases. Offensive linemen Joe Scibelli and Charlie Cowan will be 37 and 38, respectively, when the next practice session starts. A year ago Los Angeles drafted big, young linemen.

Lucas paces Nor Cal

Nor Cal Aquatics swimmer Robie Lucas blazed to a 2:42.6 clocking in the 200-yard freestyle last weekend, pacing her team in an AAU meet at San Ramon Olympic Pool.

Robie's time was good for first place, and an A clocking in the girls 10-under division.

Blayne Murphy won the 50 butterfly for Nor Cal in the 10-under class Mattt Steinhauff won the 100 and 200 free races.

In the eight-under division, John Shinnerer won the 50 fly and the 50 backstroke, while Troy Vigil posted firsts in the 100 and 50 frees.

Wendy Hiltz, 15-18, captured the 100 free, the 100 back, the 200 individual medley and the 200 breast stroke.

Nor Cal swimmers placing in the top three in their events included; Elkie Giebler, Hope Gilbert, Andrea Lucas, Bob Snodgrass, Dana Knauer, Kathy Snodgrass, Dave Davison, Jay Jones, Tom Johansen, Heidi Sorgenfrei and Marianne Mauro.

Her mother, a 152 average bowler, rolled a 539 series.

Louis ponacich and Wayne Gomes took over first place in the prep division with a 1215 total.

Beverely Moynahan and Cameron Brown are second at 1205.

MV clubs Falcons

The Monte Vista Mustangs didn't really surprise the Foothill High School soccer team in their match yesterday afternoon in Alamo. They just beat the visitors, 4-1.

After two goals by forward Eric Bruce had highlighted the downfall of his team, Falcon coach Keith Sweet said, "Monte Vista played pretty much the way I expected. They pressed very well against us."

But, he added, "We'll get them when they come down to the big field (Foothill's home pitch in Pleasanton) next month."

Mustang coach Alex LaBeaux, meanwhile, concerned himself with Friday's match at Livermore.

When asked what Monte Vista would do to offset the fearsome Cowboys, LaBeaux said, "We'll show up."

He added, "It will take a super effort to beat Livermore. We can't afford to have two or three guys off that day."

Yesterday the Mustangs were more than sufficiently 'on,' scoring their first goal 19 minutes into the game on a direct free kick by Bob Turi.

Just two minutes later, Turi assisted Bruce, who hit on a head shot out of a crowd into the left corner of the net.

Monte Vista then cooled off until just after the start of the second half. Two minutes into the latter period, Jeff Scheick sidestepped Foothill back Scott Turman and just slipped the ball past goalie Mike Stone, who has played the last few games in place of injured Bret Bevilacqua.

Thirteen minutes into the half, Foothill got its goal. Rick Gielow dribbled down the left side of the goalie's box and fired a low liner past substitute goalie Jeff Boles.

BILL CALDWELL, chairman of the running deer shoot at the Livermore-Pleasanton Rod and Gun Club, reports a good practice shoot last Sunday. Bill says it was a good indication of the number and quality of the shooters who will compete in the opening session of the competition that will be held there each month starting Jan. 18.

DON'T FORGET the first P.I.T.A. Trapshoot of the season at the local club grounds Jan. 11. The first squad will start at 10 a.m. Practice traps will be open around 9.

LARRY SMITH has things lined up for a Ham and Bacon Shoot Jan. 18, at the local club. So why not get enough of your shooting buddies to make up a squad? Then you will know that no one is sandbagging, and each of you have an equal chance of winning that ham or bacon. Larry says the first squad will start around 10 a.m. and continue until everyone has had enough shooting for the day.

NEW AMENDMENTS to the law and regulations regarding black powder and certain igniters will be taking effect shortly. In the meantime, if you have any questions as to new requirements relating to this subject, you may write to the Regional Firearms and Explosives Coordinators, 525 Market St., 34th Floor, San Francisco, 94105, phone 556-2610 They will furnish you a copy of the proposed regulations.

STILL WAITING for some relief from the unseasonably dry weather, state and federal personnel appeared this week to be making some slight gains on an outbreak of avian cholera among wintering waterfowl in northern and central California, according to the Department of Fish and Game (DFG).

Losses of ducks, geese, swans and coots continued to climb, but control efforts were stepped up with the pickup of more dead birds and the dispersal of healthy waterfowl from trouble spots.

As of midweek, more than 11,000 dead birds had been picked up from the area stretching from Centerville, Humboldt County, on the north to Merced National Wildlife Refuge in the San Josquin Valley on the south.

Several thousand more dead waterfowl remained to be picked up, and the estimated total of casualties since the onset of the disease two and half weeks ago approached 20,000 birds.

A week ago the number of dead birds was estimated at 7,500 to 10,000 and the week before at 5,000.

Affected birds spread the disease on the ground and through the water by their droppings and by nasal discharge.

Hardest hit area was the Sacramento National Wildlife Refuge seven miles south of Willows where 7,400 dead birds had been recovered as of early in the week. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service crews continued to pick up waterfowl and the toll was expected to rise.

In the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta a DFG crew, which had been on duty almost continuously since the eruption of the disease there, worked from two airboats, scattering healthy waterfowl and picking up dead birds.

Efforts were concentrated in the Rindge Track northwest of Stockton where there were masses of dead birds. Workers were preparing to move to other locations — Upper Jones Tract, Webb Tract, Victoria Island and Empire Tract — where thousands more cholera casualties were reported.

William E. Clark, associate wildlife pathologist with the DFG, said the continuing flooding of Delta hot spots was also helping to dispere waterfowl.

He said relatively few of the dead birds — 50 or 60 from the Delta — could be classed as recent casualties, and he took this to indicate that the flare-up might be slackening off.

On Sutter NWR, 12 miles southwest of Yuba City, recent casualties included an estimated 130 to 140 geese. Federal personnel from the refuge were working to drain a hot spot on private land nearby.

The DFG repeated an earlier warning to waterfowl hunters to take only those birds that were observed shot while flying. Hunters were cautioned to examine the liver of each bird and to discard those birds showing small white spots on the livers.
